White House Announces Nominations to U.S. District Court for Montana

SAN FRANCISCO – The White House has announced Thursday, May 23, 2013, President Obama’s nominations for two vacant judgeships on the United States District Court for the District of Montana.

Montana Supreme Court Justice Brian Morris was nominated to fill a judgeship left vacant when Judge Sam E. Haddon assumed senior status on December 31, 2012. Montana State District Judge Susan P. Watters was nominated to fill a judgeship left vacant on March 18, 2013, when then-Chief District Judge Richard F. Cebull assumed senior status. Judge Cebull has since retired from the federal bench.

Justice Morris, 49, has served on the Montana Supreme Court since 2005. He served previously as the solicitor general of the Montana Department of Justice since 2001 and as a senior legal officer at the United Nations Compensation Commission in Geneva, Switzerland, from 2000 to 2001. He engaged in private practice at the law firm of Goetz, Madden & Dunn, PC, in Bozeman from 1995 to 2000 and was a legal assistant for the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague from 1994 to 1995.

A native of Butte, Montana, Justice Morris received his B.A. and M.A. from Stanford University in 1987 and his J.D. with distinction from Stanford Law School in 1992. Following law school, he clerked for Judge John T. Noonan, Jr., of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit from 1992 to 1993, and for Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist of the U.S. Supreme Court, from 1993 to 1994.

Judge Watters, 54, has served on the Thirteenth Judicial District Court in Billings, Mont., since 1998. Prior to her appointment to the bench, Judge Watters had worked as a senior associate at Hendrickson, Everson, Noennig & Woodward, PC, in Billings since 1996 and was a sole practitioner of Watters Law Firm from 1995 to 1996. Judge Watters served as a deputy county attorney for the Yellowstone County Attorney’s Office from 1989 to 1995.
